Bomb cyclone takes aim at Northeast

Wild winds, torrential downpours and frigid temps take aim at the region.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

A bomb cyclone is barreling toward the Northeast, threatening areas from northern Virginia up through Maine with dangerous winds and heavy rain.

The severe weather was expected to start Wednesday evening and last into Thursday, bringing intense winds as fast as 50 mph in New York City with gusts as high as 60 mph in parts of New England, according to Accuweather. Forecasters warned that the torrential weather could cause major travel disruptions including flight delays and cancellations, and dangerous driving conditions. Power outages and flooding were also concerns as the bomb cyclone made its way south from the northern Great Lakes.

"This system will bring heavy rainfall and gusty winds to much of the Northeast Wednesday into Thursday. Upwards of 2-3+ inches of rain could fall with this storm, especially from eastern New York to southern Maine, and localized flash flooding is possible," the National Weather Service warned.

A so-called 'bomb cyclone' is defined by forecasters as a "rapidly strengthening storm in which the pressure drops 24 millibars within 24 hours." According to CNN meteorologist Dave Hennen, the system was expected to have the equivalent low pressure of a Category 1 hurricane.

After the storm passes, Boston, Philly and New York City could see temperatures dip to 40 degrees.

New York Governor Andrew Cuomo shared safety information on Wednesday as the storm took aim at the region.

If traveling during heavy rain, please drive with care and keep these tips in mind:

- Do not attempt to drive over a flooded road. Turn around and go another way.
- Do not underestimate the destructive power of fast-moving water. Two feet of fast-moving flood water will float your car. Water moving at two miles per hour can sweep cars off a road or bridge.
- Leave early to avoid being marooned on flooded roads.
- Follow recommended routes. Do not ignore emergency detours to view flooded areas.
- As you travel, monitor NOAA Weather Radio and local radio broadcasts for the latest information.
- Watch for washed-out roads, earth-slides, broken water or sewer mains, loose or downed electrical wires, and falling or fallen objects.
- Watch for areas where rivers or streams may suddenly rise and flood.

Pelosi, Trump's Syria meltdown

2 U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said Democratic leaders cut short a meeting with Republican President Donald Trump after he had a "meltdown" over a House of Representatives vote condemning his Syria withdrawal and showed no signs of having a plan to deal with a crisis there. Trump called Pelosi a "third-rate politician" and the meeting in the White House deteriorated into a diatribe, Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer and House Majority Leader Steny Hoyer told reporters. Later, in remarks to reporters on Capitol Hill, Pelosi said that Trump actually called her a "third-grade" politician. "What we witnessed on the part of the president was a meltdown. Sad to say," Pelosi had said upon leaving. Trump posted on Twitter on Wednesday night - "Nervous Nancy's unhinged meltdown!" with a photo of Pelosi standing up and pointing at him during the meeting. Cars burn in Barcelona as protests escalate

3 Protesters clashed with police in the Spanish region of Catalonia on Wednesday, with some setting cars ablaze on the third day of disturbances caused by convictions handed down to leaders of a failed bid to declare an independent state. Divisions over the secession drive that roiled Spain in 2017 have resurfaced on the streets of the region's main city Barcelona since the Supreme Court sentenced nine politicians and activists to up to 13 years in jail. Despite calls for calm from the regional government, protesters blocked roads and train lines during the day and, after dark, set fire to cars. The regional Mossos police force said acid had been thrown at officers. In some places, police charged at protesters and fired foam projectiles, Reuters witnesses said. Acting Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez said the government would act firmly and proportionately. REUTERS

Attention Men...

REVERSE ED!

A Breakthrough Solution

Now Available in New York!

Optimize your performance and get the romance back into your life.

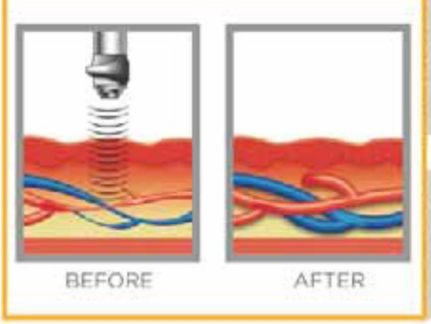
Are you struggling with erectile dysfunction, Peyronie's Disease, or performance issues? It's time to regain your confidence and get back into bed with your significant other.

Introducing the Viagra® and Cialis® alternative, the newest and most innovative ED treatment on the market today - Acoustic Wave Therapy. AWT is the FDA cleared, breakthrough solution for men suffering from ED and performance issues. There are no needles, no drugs, and no surgeries.

The non-invasive AWT treatment uses painless acoustic energy waves to repair soft tissue, improve blood circulation and stimulate the growth of new blood vessels throughout the penis. With the regeneration of blood flow and erectile tissue, the acoustic waves improve a man's sexual performance and help to produce an erection.

At Manhattan Medical Associates we take erectile dysfunction seriously. Tired of hearing "What do you expect at your age?" Erectile Dysfunction is treatable at any age.

How AWT Therapy Works:



Before:
As men age, the blood vessels that supply blood to the penis begin to break down or collapse. Natural or drug induced blood flow cannot enter into the penis, thus creating ED and frustrations with spontaneous sexual performance.

After:
Manhattan Medical Associates AWT Protocols open existing blood vessels and stimulate growth of new blood vessels. As a result, most patients experience much stronger, firmer and more sustainable erections.

AWT can treat almost any man - regardless of age or medical history. AWT is the existing solution to help treat ED within the New York area. In just a few, convenient sessions, you will be able to rejuvenate your sex life and be ready when the intimate moment arises.

Our clients that have used Manhattan Medical Associates AWT treatment have had encouraging results:

For over 11 years, Larry K., 65, has struggled to get and maintain an erection. This was a challenge that deeply frustrated him. No pill or pump has ever worked for him. After visiting Manhattan Medical Associates, Larry K. reports, "your treatment worked after a few visits! I never expected these results."

Jack B says, "I'm 79 years old and visiting your clinic was the best choice I've ever made! I only wish I had known about it years ago."

It's time to visit Manhattan Medical Associates and see what our AWT treatment is all about. Achieve the REAL results you're looking for with the expert advice you need. Solve ED TODAY.

Panicked woman calls 911 after bus driver locks her in luggage compartment

"I'm so scared. Please help," said the terrified Peter Pan bus passenger.

Bus driver Wendy Alberty.

A woman called 911 from the luggage compartment of a Peter Pan bus that was en route to Boston from Hartford, according to audio released this week.

The unsettling incident happened in August on a bus originating in New York City, according to ABC News, which obtained the frantic 911 call from Connecticut State Police.

Police pulled the bus over after almost an hour and found the woman uninjured inside the luggage compartment. The driver, 49-year-old New Jersey resident Wendy Alberty, was arrested and charged with reckless endangerment, unlawful restraint and breach of peace, though the charges were dropped.

Here is an excerpt from the 911 call:

Caller: "Yeah, hi, I have no battery left. I'm not OK. The bus driver locked me underneath the bus, um, a Peter Pan bus going en route to Boston."

Dispatch: "OK."

Caller: "Can you hear me?"

Dispatch: "The bus driver's under the bus?"

Caller: "No, she locked me under the bus with the luggage. I went to go get something –"

Dispatch: "She locked you under the bus?"

Caller: "Yes. Yes. I'm under the bus with the luggage and I'm afraid. I don't know if she's gonna ever let – like – I need help. Nobody knows where I am."

Dispatch: "OK. Where is the bus?"

Caller: "It's a Peter Pan bus. I don't know, we just left Hartford. We just were stopped at Hartford, I got out and went to go get something. My phone's gonna die I have no battery – she put me – and I went to go get something and she closed the door and we're riding the Peter Pan bus route to Boston. We're supposed to get there – I don't know – at 6. I'm so scared. Please help."

> "Yeah, hi, I have no battery left. I'm not OK. The bus driver locked me underneath the bus. "
> The victim calling 911

After the call, police were able to locate the bus traveling down Interstate 84 East.

A lawyer for Alberty told outlets that, based on evidence, she did not intentionally lock the woman in the compartment.

Nate Baber said the charges were dropped and his client was wrongfully accused, though Peter Pan placed Alberty on leave after this incident and is reportedly still on leave today.

Tim Dunn and Charlotte Charles, parents of British teen Harry Dunn who was killed in a car crash on his motorcycle, allegedly by the wife of an American diplomat. REUTERS

Trump says his meeting with grieving British family was 'beautiful' but 'sad'

Parents refuse to meet diplomat's wife while in the U.S.

U.S. President Donald Trump said on Wednesday his meeting with the parents of a man killed when his motorbike collided in England with a car driven by a U.S. diplomat's wife, was "sad" but "beautiful," but the family said it felt pressure to allow the American woman to join the session.

Charlotte Charles and Tim Dunn, parents of Harry Dunn, the 19-year-old who died in the August crash, had been invited on Tuesday to the White House, where they said they learned that Anne Sacoolas, the woman fled Britain after the fatal crash, was in the building.

During the meeting, Trump asked the parents two or three times to meet with Sacoolas, Dunn told "CBS This Morning," but they declined, saying they wanted her to return to Britain to meet with them.

Dunn's parents said Trump had been responsive during their meeting but the planned encounter with Sacoolas had come as a bombshell.

"There was a bit of pressure, but we stuck to our guns," he said.

Later Trump told reporters he had expressed condolences on behalf of the United States.

The meeting was "beautiful in a certain way" and "very sad, to be honest," said Trump, speaking to reporters at the White House on Wednesday ahead of an Oval Office meeting with Italian President Sergio Mattarella.

"I offered to bring the person in question in, and they weren't ready for it," the president said. "I know the people were lovely, they were very nice and they were desperately sad."

> "I know the people were lovely, they were very nice and they were desperately sad."
> President Donald Trump

Trump suggested that the idea of bringing Dunn's parents and Sacoolas together came from British Prime Minister Boris Johnson.

"I spoke with Boris," Trump told reporters. "He asked me if I'd do that, and I did it."

The parents want Sacoolas, who left Britain under a disputed claim of diplomatic immunity, to return to England to speak to the police. Through her lawyers, Sacoolas said she was "devastated" and was willing to meet Dunn's family.

"We've said all along we are willing to meet her, but it has to be with therapists and mediators. And that's not just for us; it's for her as well," Charles told CBS. "To be thrown into a room together with no prior warning, that's not good for her mental health, and it's certainly not good for ours."

Harry Dunn died in August in the accident near RAF Croughton, an air force base in Northamptonshire in central England used by the U.S. military.

While Trump and his national security adviser, Robert O'Brien, had ruled out Sacoolas returning to Britain, Charles said Trump had taken her hand and promised to try to look at the issue from another angle.

The Dunn family's lawyer, Mark Stephens, told BBC Radio that offer had left open the opportunity for a political solution.

"We have said for a long time the family needs to meet, they need to meet in private, away from the media and not curated by politicians, spies or indeed lawyers," he said.

"Most sensible folk and not a nincompoop in a hurry would understand that." REUTERS

Tax relief program would help NYers who spend over 30 percent of income on rent

A growing portion of New Yorkers can be considered rent-burdened.

MICHELLE COHEN
letters@metro.us

State Sen. Brian A. Benjamin has proposed a bill that aims to give New York renters a much-needed break. The Harlem Democrat's bill is modeled after the federal version proposed by Sen. Kamala Harris and would entitle lower-income tenants to a refundable tax credit if their rent and utilities account for a significant portion – over 30 percent – of their income, the Daily News reports.

city households forking over a third of their income toward rent after rental housing vouchers and Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) benefits.

And 91 percent of households who are paying more than 50 percent of their income in rent are low-income New Yorkers. The tax credit's availability would decrease as household gross income rises; it would cap out at $125,000 a year.

Benjamin, who is chairman of the Senate Revenue and Budget committee, has set his sights on another office – possibly a 2021 run for city comptroller, though he's said that he's currently focused on his job in Albany. He views the Benjamin says his bill mirrors Harris'; he has endorsed her White House bid. "This bill is for the everyday New Yorker," Benjamin said. proposal as a necessary way to fight poverty and homelessness.

"When it comes to legislation like this it's sort of beyond budgetary concerns that we typically have. We're going to be looking at that more closely as we go forward. But as far as I'm concerned, this is so important that we can move forward even without having that buttoned down because it's such a pressing issue for everyday New Yorkers."

UFC brings clash of titans to Boston this weekend

Heavy hitters Chris Weidman and Dominick Reyes talk fight night at the Garden.

MATT JUUL

GETTY IMAGES

Expect fireworks when the UFC returns to the TD Garden on Friday night, as former middleweight champion Chris Weidman steps up in weight class to face undefeated light heavyweight star Dominick Reyes in a main event showdown.

While the bout is a classic matchup between a living legend and a rising contender, it actually marks a bit of new territory for Weidman. The 35-year-old New York native isn't just going up to 205 lbs. for the first time in his career, he's also taking on a new role as the experienced veteran who must halt the momentum of a hungry new kid on the block.

As someone who was once in Reyes' position – having famously slayed the greatest mixed martial artist of all-time in back-to-back bouts against Anderson Silva in 2013 – Weidman knows how dangerous an energized up-and-comer can be. That's why the former champ isn't taking Reyes lightly ahead of their battle in Boston.

"It's a tough fight," says Weidman. "He's definitely hungry. He sees his future being bright."

"I was there at one point too," he adds. "I just think there's levels to this game. I'm going to show him that I'm on a different level."

As for Reyes, the 29-year-old California native and former college football star knows that Friday will be the biggest fight of his career. In addition to facing a dangerous veteran in Weidman, this weekend's showdown will be the first time he steps into a cage as part of a main event. With a perfect 11-0 record and five straight wins against tough competition since joining the UFC, Reyes doesn't plan on wasting his shot.

"With this fight, if I go out and do what I know I'm capable of, there will be no doubt that I'm the guy," says Reyes.

Although both men are at different points in their careers, they share a singular goal: beating Jon Jones for the light heavyweight crown. The reigning titleholder remains the king of the division, despite his numerous controversies in and out of the Octagon, which is why Weidman and Reyes will stop at nothing for a shot at the belt.

For Weidman, the road to Jones may not be the easiest. Despite being the former middleweight champ and owning wins over Silva and other top fighters, he comes into Friday's fight riding a bit of skid, having lost four out of his last five fights since losing the middleweight title in 2015. While he's not looking past Reyes and is willing to fight his way up the 205 lb. ladder, Weidman admits that beating Jones would become one of his favorite career highlights.

"[Beating Silva] is the highlight of my career," says Weidman. "I don't know if I'll beat that. Maybe beating Jon Jones is right up there. That's what I'm chasing."

"I think I have all the tools it takes to take it to him," he adds, noting his jiu-jitsu skills, pace and background as a former Division I All-American wrestler.

Reyes isn't overlooking his next opponent either, praising Weidman as "the most complete martial artist" he's ever faced. However, he's equally as excited to hopefully take on Jones for the light heavyweight championship one day, which may come sooner rather than later should he defeat Weidman and add another win to his spotless record.

"[Jones] was the champ when I first started," Reyes says. "He's always been a guy I had on my radar."

"I think the world wants to see a guy who is capable of taking out Jon," he adds. "If I go out and show that, then everything will take care of itself."

At the end of the day, though, both men share another goal that transcends sports. Sure, they want to go down in the history books as the greatest fighters of all-time, but Weidman and Reyes also want to leave legacies of respect and hard work.

"Just a hard-working guy who believed in himself and accomplished a lot," Weidman says of how he wants to be remembered. "Someone who was a good role model for kids and kept it real."

"I'm fighting for the hardworking people who do the right thing," says Reyes.

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Parents of slain gay man chide Trump's attorney general over LGBT rights

Son Matthew, 21, was murdered in anti-gay hate crime.

The parents of slain gay Wyoming man Matthew Shepard blasted U.S. Attorney General William Barr on Wednesday for failing to stand up for LGBT civil rights in a statement read at a Justice Department ceremony marking the 10-year anniversary of a hate crime law bearing their son's name.

Judy and Dennis Shepard did not attend, but Cynthia Deitle, a former FBI agent and now an executive with the Matthew Shepard Foundation LGBT rights organization, read a scathing letter they wrote, drawing applause from many in attendance at the event commemorating the Matthew Shepard and James Byrd, Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act.

"We find it interesting and hypocritical that he (Barr) would invite us to this event commemorating a hate crime law named after our son and Mr. Byrd, while, at the same time, asking the Supreme Court to allow the legalized firing of transgender employees," Deitle said, reading from the letter.

Barr's Justice Department argued at the U.S. Supreme Court on Oct. 8 on behalf of President Donald Trump's administration that a landmark decades-old federal anti-discrimination law that bars sex discrimination in the workplace does not cover sexual orientation or gender identity. REUTERS

Trump officials rush to Turkey as Moscow advances to fill Syria void from U.S. retreat

The Trump administration dispatched its top officials to Turkey on Wednesday for emergency talks to try to persuade Ankara to halt an assault on northern Syria, while Russian troops swept into territory abandoned by Washington in a sudden retreat.

Robert O'Brien, White House national security adviser since last month, arrived in Turkey aiming to meet Foreign Minister Mevlut Cavusoglu on Wednesday. Vice President Mike Pence and Secretary of State Mike Pompeo are expecting to meet the following day with President Tayyip Erdogan.

The administration is trying to contain the fallout from Erdogan's decision to send forces last week to attack Syrian Kurdish militia that were Washington's close allies.

Acting last week after a phone call with Erdogan, President Donald Trump swiftly upended five years of U.S. policy with his unexpected decision to withhold protection from Syria's Kurds.

Protesters take part in a rally against the Turkish military operation in Syria. REUTERS

Erdogan has insisted there will be no ceasefire, and said he might call off a visit to the United States next month because of the "very big disrespect" shown by U.S. politicians.

He also denounced Washington for taking the "unlawful, ugly step" of imposing criminal charges against a Turkish state bank over charges it broke sanctions on Iran.

Syrian government troops accompanied by Russian forces meanwhile entered the city of Kobani, a strategically important border city and a potential flashpoint for a wider conflict, the UK-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, which monitors the eight-year-old Syrian war, reported.

Their reported arrival follows a deal cut between the Kurdish-led Syrian Democratic Forces militia, which has controlled the city, and Damascus to deploy the Syrian army in border areas to help fend off the Turkish offensive.

Turkey's assault forced Washington to abandon a strategy in place for five years and pull its troops from northern Syria.

It has spawned a humanitarian crisis, with 160,000 civilians taking flight, a security alert over thousands of Islamic State fighters abandoned in Kurdish jails, and a political maelstrom at home for Trump, accused by congressional leaders, including fellow Republicans, of betraying loyal U.S. allies, the Kurds.

Syrian government forces, backed by Washington's adversaries Russia and Iran, have meanwhile taken advantage of the power vacuum left by retreating U.S. troops to advance swiftly into the largest swath of territory previously outside their grasp. REUTERS

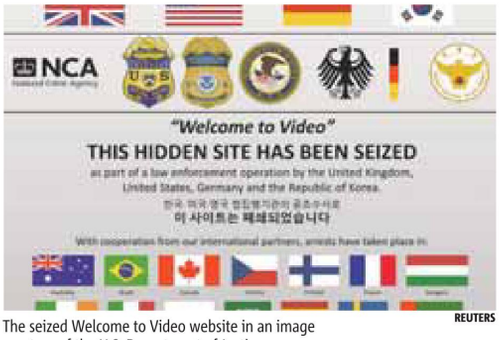
Dark web child porn bust leads to 338 arrests worldwide

Sick site monetized abuse using bitcoin cryptocurrency.

Law enforcement officials said on Wednesday they had arrested hundreds of people worldwide after knocking out a South Korea-based dark web child pornography site that sold gruesome videos for digital cash.

Officials from the United States, Britain and South Korea described the network as one of the largest child pornography operations they had encountered to date.

Called Welcome To Video, the website relied on the bitcoin cryptocurrency to sell access to 250,000 videos depicting child sexual abuse, authorities said, including footage of extremely young children being raped. Its upload page specifically stated, "Do not upload adult porn."



The seized Welcome to Video website in an image courtesy of the U.S. Department of Justice. REUTERS

"Darknet sites that profit from the sexual exploitation of children are among the most vile and reprehensible forms of criminal behavior," U.S. Assistant Attorney General Brian A. Benczkowski said.

Officials have rescued at least 23 underage victims in the United States, Britain and Spain who were being actively abused by users of the site, the Justice Department said. Many children in the videos have not yet been identified.

The site's vast library – nearly half of it consisting of images never seen before by law enforcement – is an illustration of what authorities say is an explosion of sexual abuse content online. In a statement, Britain's National Crime Agency said officials were seeing "increases in severity, scale and complexity."

Welcome To Video's operator, a South Korean named Jong Woo Son, and 337 users in 12 different countries, have been charged so far, authorities said.

Son, currently serving an 18-month sentence in South Korea, was also indicted on federal charges in Washington.

Several other people charged in the case have already been convicted and are serving prison sentences of up to 15 years, according to the U.S. Justice Department.

Welcome To Video is one of the first websites to monetize child pornography using bitcoin, which allows users to hide their identities during financial transactions.

Users were able to redeem the digital currency in return for "points" that they could spend downloading videos or buying all-you-can watch "VIP" accounts. REUTERS

Obama tweets support for Canadian PM Trudeau in re-election campaign

Former U.S. President Barack Obama voiced his support on Wednesday for Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, who faces a tough battle for re-election next week.

"I was proud to work with Justin Trudeau as President," Obama said in a tweet. "He's a hard-working, effective leader who takes on big issues like climate change. The world needs his progressive leadership now, and I hope our neighbors to the north support him for another term."

The two progressive leaders formed a close friendship that has remained a popular topic on social media since Obama, a Democrat, left the White House in January 2017. They were spotted having dinner together at an Ottawa restaurant earlier this year.

"Thanks my friend," Trudeau responded on Twitter. "We're working hard to keep our progress going."

Trudeau was the first Canadian prime minister the United States honored with a state dinner in almost two decades when Obama invited him and his wife to Washington in March 2016 after Trudeau won power the previous October.

Trudeau has had a rockier relationship with Obama's Republican successor, Donald Trump.

Opinion polls strongly suggest Trudeau will lose his parliamentary majority in Monday's election.

It is not the first time Obama has endorsed a foreign leader. He tweeted his support for Emmanuel Macron ahead of France's 2017 presidential election.

The U.S. Embassy in Ottawa declined to comment on the endorsement on the grounds that Obama is a private citizen.

The Conservatives and left-leaning New Democrats – the two main opposition parties contesting the election - did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

Elections Canada, the country's nonpartisan elections administrator, said Obama's tweet did not contravene regulations on foreign interference.

Leg Pain & Cramps While Walking?

Pain while walking or jogging can be a sign of Peripheral Artery Disease (PAD), which if left untreated can cause severe pain, numbness, impotence, non-healing sores… even amputation.

- ☑ Leg pain while walking that stops after few minutes at rest
- ☑ Leg numbness or weakness
- ☑ Foot or toe wounds that won't heal
- ☑ Skin discoloration or shiny skin on the leg
- ☑ One leg or foot is colder than the other
- ☑ Hair loss on your legs and feet

Smokers and people with diabetes or hypertension are more at risk for PAD.

Peter Hook on reclaiming the songs of New Order

The musician will play the New Order albums 'Technique' and 'Republic' on tour

patrick.king@metro.us

Peter Hook knows that he still has his work cut-out for him. The legendary bassist of the seminal British Post-Punk band Joy Division and later the Alternative-Pop sensations New Order has been touring the world with his band, Peter Hook and the Light, devoting tours to recreating some of the classic recordings throughout his career for audiences dying to hear them. For his current tour, Peter Hook and the Light will be performing the New Order albums "Technique" and "Republic" in full as well as some fan-favorites and a set devoted the Joy Division era.

That's the simple and pleasant part of the story, of course. When I spoke with the music legend over the phone, he explained to me that he would not be performing these records on the road — 13 at this point with only three left to go in the catalog, in his words — if it were not for the unceremonious split of New Order back in 2007. Since then, Hook formed this band as a way to just simply play music. But when the band New Order reformed without him, he took it personally. And rightfully so.

"When New Order split up in 2007, one of my great frustrations with the band was the songs that we didn't play," Hook explains. "We played a very similar set list all the time. There's so many great songs that we just ignored, that Barney [Bernard Sumner, vocalist and multi-instrumentalist of New Order] didn't want to play. Yeah, it was a hell of a frustration. So the thing is, is that when I started doing Joy Division, celebrating Joy Division in 2010, it seemed sort of logical to do the same thing with New Order. Now, when they found out that I was going to celebrate New Order, I'm pretty sure that's when they decided to get the band back together again behind my back, you know? And excluding me, shall we say, from it, because they knew that I was going to do New Order. Maybe they thought they were either going to get it back or I was going to steal it from them. But I mean, certainly I had no intention of using the New Order name. To me it's all about the music. I don't want to pretend to be something I'm not. It's about enjoying the music that I helped to write, and that everybody else is ignoring."

While the Hook has been out on the road with Light treating fans to performances of these albums in their intended sequences and played to air-tight precision performances, I ask him if he feels a sense of reclamation of the material they are playing. To that question, Hook offered a blunt yet frank answer.

"Yeah, I mean put it this way: I've got a great relationship with New Order's songs. I just wish I had great relationships with the other members of New Order," says Hook. "I've got the songs back. Me and the songs are in love. It's the honeymoon period. We're all over each other. Unfortunately, with the other members of New Order, we're still in the... shall we say cutting the trousers in half and looking at the cat with a saw, and things like that. Very, very bad divorce still ongoing, shall we say."

As such an integral part of the classic sounds Joy Division and the innovative dance-forward territory that New Order went during this period of the band, can you really blame Hook for his enthusiasm for celebrating the material night after night? With both of these records in particular Hook is not only rekindling his love of material that may have been made during a fraught and tense time in the band, but fully realizing songs he believed never reached their potential in the studio.

> "I don't want to pretend to be something I'm not. It's about enjoying the music that I helped to write..."
> Peter Hook

"The interesting thing about playing 'Technique' and 'Republic', obviously they're very different. And they were also written... Maybe I can't say under very different circumstances. But certainly one, we were definitely a group, shall we say. The second one, we were definitely not a group. I think our attitude toward each other was probably pretty much the same, truth be told. But 'Technique' is very well known in England, and 'Republic' isn't. Whereas in America, 'Republic' was our best selling album. So even much bigger than 'Technique'. So it's going to be interesting to see what the reaction is. I mean it's a tough LP. Technique is tough to play. It's not easy. 'Republic', because of its different feel, is quite difficult to play. And there's a wonderful sense of achievement when you do get it right. Probably, people don't notice. But we do, because we've had to work so hard to get it up to a standard," says Hook.

Reclaiming these records, in a figurative way, is no small feat for Hook and he is finding both a sense of enjoyment and closure while celebrating them for the influential achievements that they are. That is to say, no matter how challenging it can be to pull off the material night after night.

"This [set] is quite a challenge, actually. We've played long sets before, but this set that we'll be playing in America is two hours and 45 minutes. It starts off with a Joy Division set, then we do 'Technique', then 'Republic'," says Hook. "So yeah, it is a hell of a set. But I must admit, it flies by. I'm enjoying it immensely, absolutely. It's probably the only time that I truly relax with anything we regards to New Order, is when I play the music. Because outside of playing the music, it's still so angsty and so dysfunctional. But yeah, the only respite you get is when you play the music."

Peter Hook and the Light play Brooklyn Steel Friday, October 25. 319 Frost St., Brooklyn.

The Vivian Girls are back, and they're going to teach us a few lessons

We spoke with the influential band ahead of their upcoming tour.

KATE WADKINS

PROVIDED

"Life's too short not to do the things you wanna do when you can do them," says Katy Goodman. Goodman, bassist of the Vivian Girls, is telling me why and how the band reunited for the first time since their breakup in 2014 to record their new full-length album, "Memory," in secret.

"We had been broken up for about five years and Katy just called me one day and was like, 'Hey, do you want to do the band again?' And I was like, 'Yeah! I'm gonna move to L.A.' And that was pretty much it. It was as easy as that. I was always down to play music with the Vivian Girls again, and I think they knew that," Cassie Ramone, guitarist, elaborates. In this moment, the Vivian Girls bring to mind one of my favorite feminist art pieces by Mary Kelly: "Seemed right… just made sense… like a lightning bolt!"

And it was like a lightning bolt: Goodman and Ramone reunited with drummer Ali Koehler in a way that they all describe as "natural," making it sound as if it were easier to get the band back together than to hold it back.

"It was so much fun. It was one of the best experiences of my life. I felt like Kylie Jenner or something," says Ramone, reminiscing on the band's decision to reunite and record their new album totally in secret – and keep that secret to themselves. Goodman chimes in, "Except Kylie Jenner didn't reveal that she was pregnant until after she gave birth." She continues explaining the rarity of a secret project in 2019: "Especially [now] where every move you make is on your Instagram, everyone knows everything. So it was really cool to partake in something very secretive."

If you close your eyes, you can hear the best parts of the late aughts in the Vivian Girls' "Memory," their dissonant and distinct sound for fans of grunge greats and girl groups alike, music that sounds like it's made for bedroom dancing. Jangly guitars, chords and lyrics connect to a vague yet poignant sense of melancholy. The songs we all danced and swayed to when our favorite DIY clubs were still open; when possibility still felt real in Williamsburg. Dreamily lo-fi. Yet "Memory" sounds bigger than any of their previous recordings. Somehow more deliberate.

It's the Vivian Girls grown up. Ramone describes personal hardships and a sense of humility that permeate a new way of being for the band. There's a slowing down. "I really like that we have this long lead time...instead of trying to hit the ground running while doing a million other things," says Koehler.

"Back when we were an active band, we were writing songs on tour, then on our week off from tour we'd record a new album; everything right on top of one another, no breaks," adds Goodman. They describe this current iteration as "a lot less urgent."

And that's the beauty of a comeback: the Vivian Girls embodied much of what the New York scene was in 2007-2014. A group that started out playing DIY shows from the basements of New Brunswick, New Jersey to the punk houses of Brooklyn, and eventually toured the world, signing to Polyvinyl Records. Now, they return to each other, to what they've created together.

As the Vivian Girls head out on the road, they can't wait to play live again. "I am very excited to play shows again," says Goodman, definitively. "We've all played a lot of shows since Vivian Girls broke up, but there's nothing quite like a Vivian Girls show for me. No other show can compare."

Catch Vivian Girls tonight at Warsaw. 261 Driggs Ave., Brooklyn.

Will Smith, face to face with himself in "Gemini Man"

Ang Lee's "Gemini Man" starring Will Smith is already in theatres

CATALINA FORERO
MWN

PARAMOUNT

If you were meet face to face with yourself from 20 years ago, what would you say? That's partly the essence of this action film that tells the story of Henry Brogan (Will Smith), an experienced hit man who's ready to leave the world of crime behind but first has to conquer an unexpected obstacle: a younger clone of himself out to kill him.

"It's an Ang Lee film, with Jerry Bruckheimer and Will Smith, what did you expect?", says between laughs the Oscar-winning director. "I think it's an action movie with a bit of science fiction, but it's a drama at heart."

The film, on the drawing board since 1997, had been archived because the technology of the moment was not enough to achieve what Jerry Bruckheimer and his team of producers had in mind. The idea was retaken in 2018 and under Lee's command, effects never seen before were used to create this clone starring Gemini Man. At a press junket in Los Angeles, California, in which Metro was present, Will Smith and Ang Lee talked about the already worldwide released film.

Besides the action, what does this movie tell us about our relationship with our past selves?

Will Smith: It was really amazing for me to do this. The team brought all this material from my past works, and I could see all the tragedies that I have committed in the world of entertainment. [Laughs] But you know? It's really wonderful to be able to see myself that way; see the parallel between youth and experience and think: how old would I really like to be again if I could? My twenties stunk, so I'm not going anywhere near twenty [Laughs] ... maybe my thirties, but in reality, it's beautiful to have the possibility to explore that. In my twenties I would had never said that they stunk, but now I am much more relaxed and comfortable in my own skin.

Let's talk about technology. We have seen several films in which digital rejuvenation elements are used, how can you specifically describe what was done in Gemini Man and how this is different from what has already been done?

Ang Lee: I would like to clarify that we did not rejuvenate the character. We were not giving brush strokes to hide the passing of years in someone. What we did was create a new character, which looks like a young Will Smith, which is probably not exactly how people remember him at that age and that could act like that, although I have to say that the biggest 'problem' we had is that Will is a much better actor now than 30 years ago.

Will Smith: Ang told me, when I was looking at Junior (Will's young character): 'I need you to act less well', then he would show me some of my old performances and say: 'Look at this, that's not good acting, I need you to do it like that. [Laughs]

Ang Lee: We wanted to create a new character for the film, and that was really the challenge: placing technology on our side. We had a model, but we wanted to make a person. A clone is not a robot, it's a human being with feelings, with a personality, and all the elements that make up a real human so, this was not just an action film, but a drama. We see how it affects him to be attacked by his younger self and what that means, what feelings can arouse in someone. What would happen if you could live twice or if, on the other hand, you could see your future? Does a clone have a soul? Does it have emotions? Do you treat it like a real human being? How do we react to that? All these existential and human questions are hidden here under the layers of action and for me that is very interesting.

What was the hardest thing to achieve when filming?

Will Smith: The most difficult thing for me was that in the main shoot we recorded Henry and in the scenes with Junior we had another actor standing in front of me doing his parts so that I could have a reference. At first, it was great because I was Henry all the time, but in the end I had to be Junior, and to do so I entered the motion capture stage, in which I had a helmet and two cameras on my face all the time and, on top of that, I had to repeat all the scenes where they were together, and there it was a little harder to try to connect because I had to go back to the scene and understand where I was at that moment. It was a strange and complicated process, but in the end satisfactory.

It's a fascinating concept for an action film because Junior is trying to kill Henry and Henry is trying to save Junior from becoming him.

Will Smith: I really like the idea that the seeds of our worst nightmare grow within ourselves. We ourselves create our worst enemy, in fact, we are our worst enemy. The greatest and most painful difficulties that we are going to go through will be born from the seeds of each one and that concept seems fascinating to me.

The first woman to reach Moon will wear this spacesuit

Artemis mission is almost ready

NASA has recently presented the spacesuit that will be worn by the first woman to set foot on the Moon in 2024, as part of the agency's Artemis program seeking to relaunch trips to the our planet's natural satellite. The so-called Exploration Extravehicular Mobility Unit (xEMU) was worn during the presentation by Kristine Davis, a spacesuit engineer at NASA's Johnson Space Center. MWN

The agency also presented the Orion Crew Survival System suit.

Features of spacesuits xEMU are the improved version of suits used during the Apollo era and those currently used for spacewalks outside the International Space Station. They will be used by the first woman and next men to explore the Moon as part of NASA's Artemis program. Another presented suit dubbed Orion is designed for a custom fit and incorporates safety, technology and mobility features that will help protect astronauts on the launch day. MWN

Yanks, Astros ALCS Game 4 rained out, will play tonight

Inclement weather in the Bronx forced MLB to reschedule Wednesday night's Game 4.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Yankees fans have to wait an extra day to try and knot things back up.

Major League Baseball decided to move Game 4 of the ALCS between the Yankees and Astros back to Thursday night after rain and heavy winds swept through the Bronx on Wednesday.

While the inclement weather was in the forecast for days, MLB didn't make the call to postpone the game until 12:00 p.m.

Now the remaining schedule of the series is drastically changed.

The extra off day will allow both the Yankees and Astros an extra day to rest their pitchers, guaranteeing another marquee matchup on Thursday night at Yankee Stadium.

Houston will be able to start Zack Greinke on regular rest rather than experiment with a bullpen game. The initial hope entering the postseason was that veteran righty Wade Miley would be able to make a Game 4 start, but he was left off the ALCS roster after getting smacked for three runs on four hits in 2.2 innings against the Tampa Bay Rays in the ALDS.

Pitting Miley against a much more imposing Yankees lineup in the Bronx would have spelled disaster for the Astros, which left manager AJ Hinch relying on the possibility of a bullpen game.

The extra day allows the Astros to push that game back for a little while longer as Greinke will be looking to rebound after allowing three runs on seven hits in six innings during Game 1, which the Yankees won 7-0.

Masahiro Tanaka will get the call for the Yankees tonight in a rescheduled Game 4 of the ALCS against the Astros. GETTY IMAGES

For the Yankees, Game 4 getting pushed back would allow manager Aaron Boone to skip starting a reliever such as Chad Green in a bullpen game, as well.

The Yankees bullpen has been used plenty throughout the first three games of the ALCS, pitching 15.1 of a possible 28 innings this series. The Astros' bullpen has pitched just 9.1 innings during that same stretch.

It was the expected strategy used by Yankees manager Aaron Boone, who made it known that he wasn't going to let his starting pitchers get into any kind of trouble during the ALCS.

But with the innings mounting up, Masahiro Tanaka will get the ball as he continues to build his impressive postseason resume — and maybe eat some innings in the process.

Tanaka pitched a gem in Game 1, facing the minimum over six innings while allowing just one hit. He was lifted after just 68 pitches by Boone, who kept the 30-year-old fresh to get to his bullpen.

He might need more from Tanaka Thursday night as the Yankees have lost two straight to Houston after stealing Game 1 in decisive fashion. Tuesday night saw Astros ace Gerrit Cole shut down New York, holding them scoreless for seven innings in a 4-1 victory.

But Tanaka is just the man the Yankees want to see toeing the rubber for Game 4. In his career, he's 5-2 in the postseason with a 1.32 ERA and 0.73 WHIP.

Yankees not getting enough from Sanchez, Encarnacion in postseason

Two big bats in the middle of the Yankees lineup have come up empty during the ALCS.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

It's during the biggest moments when some of the weaker links are exposed.

That's exactly the case for the Yankees, who are searching for answers following two straight losses to the Astros to fall behind 2-1 in the ALCS.

Tuesday night's Game 3 further exposed the struggles of two key bats in the middle of the order in Gary Sanchez and Edwin Encarnacion — both of whom are muddling through a difficult postseason.

Encarnacion has just one hit in 12 at-bats during the ALCS — a two-out sixth-inning double off Gerrit Cole that gave the Yankees a glimmer of hope before Didi Gregorius' towering fly ball to left field came a few feet short of giving New York a lead.

His first two at-bats of Game 3 did absolutely nothing to help the Yankees' cause against the red-hot Cole. He recorded two outs on two pitches as he was unable to make the righty work early in the game.

Cole managed to go seven innings on 112 pitches without yielding a single run.

His struggles are putting extra pressure on the injured Giancarlo Stanton to get back quickly from his strained quad. The star slugger, who was limited to just 18 games during the regular season, has been out since the ALDS but would be an upgrade at the DH spot over Encarnacion.

Sanchez has been even worse during the ALCS as his meek showing forced manager Aaron Boone to move him further down the lineup for Game 3.

The move did little to help as Sanchez went 0-for-3 with two strikeouts against Cole before grounding out against Will Harris to end the eighth.

Suspect defense only heaped more ire from the Yankees fan base on Sanchez when a wild pitch got past the catcher, allowing Houston's third run of the game to score in the seventh inning.

Reliever Zack Britton's spiked fastball that traveled no more than 45 feet didn't do Sanchez any favors — especially because it was on the opposite side of where he had originally set up on the plate.

If Sanchez's bat isn't working — and it isn't considering he is now 1-for-13 in the ALCS — he doesn't bring much to the Yankees.

It has now presented Boone with the choice of calling upon backup catcher Austin Romine to fill in for a night.

Romine slashed .281/.310/.439 in 72 games during the regular season but has not appeared in a game since Sept. 28.

Angels name Joe Maddon manager

GETTY IMAGES

The Los Angeles Angels and Joe Maddon agreed to terms on a contract to make him the team's next manager.

In making the official announcement on Wednesday, the Angels did not release contract specifics. The Los Angeles Times and Orange County Register, however, both said it was a three-year deal, with ESPN reporting the value between $12 million and $15 million.

For the 65-year-old Maddon, it's a return to the organization with which he spent 31 seasons before becoming the manager of the Tampa Bay Rays in 2006.

"We are thrilled that Joe is coming back home and bringing an exciting brand of baseball to our fans," Angels general manager Billy Eppler said. "Every stop he has made throughout his managerial career he has built a culture that is focused on winning while also allowing his players to thrive. We believe Joe will be a great asset for our club and look forward to him leading the team to another World Series championship."

The Angels fired Brad Ausmus as their manager after one season on Sept. 30.

Maddon, who mutually parted ways with the Chicago Cubs after the regular season, was with the Angels' organization in various capacities – including as a player, scout, coach, and interim manager — from 1975 to 2005.

Maddon posted a 27-24 record as interim manager across two separate stints in 1996 and 1999 and served as the bench coach for the Angels' 2002 World Series championship team under Mike Scioscia.

Maddon since spent nine seasons with the Rays and five more with Chicago, including winning a World Series title with the Cubs in 2016. He has a career record of 1,252-1,068.

Ausmus, 50, guided the Angels to a 72-90 record this season. Los Angeles finished 35 games behind the American League West champion Houston Astros and failed to make the playoffs for the fifth straight season.
